THE MEANING OF V-E DAY

As the 7th and 8th grade pupils came to their English classes on the morning of May 8, after listening to the radio broadcast of President Truman, each pupil was asked to write what the day meant. There was no discussion and they all wrote spontaneously. These are only a few of the many thoughtful expressions received: expressions received;

This morning, May 8, President Truman broadcast the great news of the unconditional surrender in Europe which we have been an singly awaiting so long. It means xiously awaiting so long. PACIFIC:

Fighting Rages

From the Ryukyus to the Philippines and westward to China bitter fighting raged in the Pacific theater as U. S. and Chinese forces remained on the offensive against desperate Japanese troops battling on the outer perimeter of the enemy's main defenses.

Heaviest action took place on Okinawa and Luzon, where American G.I.s drilled deeper into rugged Japanese strongpoints, but Chinese units also pressed vigorous attacks against enemy columns seeking to neutralize Allied air bases west of the sea coast upon which the Nips fear a U. S. landing.

Standing but 325 miles from Tokyo, Okinawa was bitterly defended by a fanatical Japanese garrison, which only slowly crumbled under the concentrated bombardment of U.S. warships and aircraft of the "Little Siegfried" line strung about the island capital of Naha. Throwing in swarms of planes, the Japs persistently harassed the at-

Though regional systems were authorized to move for peaceful settlement of a dispute within their respective areas and join in collective defense in case of aggression against any of their members, the world security organization's power to employ economic or military means to check a prospective aggressor was retained.

SUGAR:

Cuba Short Heading up the nation's prospective sugar pinch are reports that U. S. price offerings for the Cuban crop have discouraged bumper production and the building of reserves.

Coming on top of the statement of Rep. Clinton Anderson (N. M.) that Cuba has refused to sell this country her 1946 sugar output unless it also agreed to purchase 1947 production as well, these reports indicated that American offerings of 3.10 cents a pound have not fully satisfied millers, planters and field workers in view of the rising cost of living in the Caribbean island.

Partly because of smaller plantings and a severe drouth, 1945 Cuban production has fallen 790,000 tons from the 1944 figure of 3,958,000, thus putting a severe crimp in prospective U.S. supplies already shadowed by decreased stocks partly attributed to laxity in rationing and continued subnormal sugar beet output.

Bakers' Pinch

Already falling far short of increased demands estimated at 50 per cent since the war, bakery goods will be even in tighter supply in forthcoming months, with bakers cut to 80 per cent of the shortening used in 1942. Previously, they had In fixing reconversion prices at been limited to 100 per cent along the 1942 level, OPAdministrator with 75 per cent of their 1941 sugar Chester Bowles declared it was the

While the sugar and shortening shortages have deterred bakery production, flour has been plentiful.

and interviews where the great tragedies of little countries-Albania, Korea, Poland-and the little differences between great countries have been tossed at us, in vibrant earnest voices, in stiff and proper accents. It would be easy to lose sight of woods for the trees. But as I sit here leafing over faded notes of another such conference, I know that the tremendous goal for which these delegates have striven is so much higher, so much wider than all the little controversies that it still is just what the chambermaid in my hotel said it was.

She was gray haired. She had a son on Saipan, she told me, and when I asked her what she thought of this gathering she laid down an armful of linen and looked up. "I guess this is just about the most important thing that ever happened,' she said, "trying to stop wars," How important this meeting will prove to be depends on how well the world avoids the pitfalls which wrecked its last attempt to treat war as we treat disease; not as something that we irreverently consider as an act of God, like a tornado, but something to which mankind is exposed through ignorance and indifference and which can be

Why did the League of Nations fail? What are the pitfalls which the United Nations must avoid?

Germans Thought Armies Unbeaten

I have been talking over that Paris conference with a friend whom I met there—a quarter of a century ago. He lived with the League of Nations through its early uncertain days, on until its death of malnutrition. Together we agreed on certain fundamental mistakes made in the past which must be avoided if the result of the San Francisco conference is a success.

is the same as the object of the League of Nations: to stop aggression before it starts. Last time, efforts were directed specifically toward Germany as the one potential aggressor. Germany has been so utterly defeated that she cannot strike back for a long time but our conduct toward Germany after the last war can be related to all future attempts at aggression.

The first mistake made last time. namely, allowing the myth to grow up that the German army was not defeated, that other causes enforced capitulation, cannot be made again since the German army is now destroyed. But there is danger that another myth may grow which will encourage nazi-fascism elsewhere.

Even if the so-called German government headed by Admiral Doenitz formally capitulated to the Allies instead of having the various generals surrender separately, the Nazis might well claim that they themselves never did surrender.

A very good legal case might be made out supporting the thesis that Doenitz was not the authorized head of the German government and that government still existed in exile, Whether Hitler and Himmler are dead makes no difference. No proof can be adduced that Doenitz is the authorized successor to Hitler. There has been no recognized revolution which could be recognized first, de facto, then de jure.

We do not know that Hitler authorized Doenitz as his successor. We do know that he had publicly indicated certain successors. I saw and heard him do it in the Reichstag meeting in the Kroll opera house in Berlin on September 1, 1939, when he announced that he was going to the front to join the army already invading Poland.

I saw him turn from the lectern and indicate, first Herman Goering, sitting high on the praesidium as his successor, if he failed to return and second, the tall and lanky Hess sitting in the first row on the ros-

Therefore it would be easy for whoever claims official fuehrership to have moved into Norway while it was still in German hands, take a long-distance submarine and find asylum and support in some country It has been a day of conferences which would conceal his identity and where sufficient sympathy for nazifascism existed, to carry on underground activities and foster the myth of the immortality of nazi-dom just as the myth of the German army's invincibility was kept alive. That is one thing that apparently is not realized. It is important. It must be watched. Now there are a number of other pitfalls which I might mention but won't spend too long over these faded notes with fresh breezes from the Pacific reminding me that we are living in the land of tomorrow and not vesterday. But alas, some of the dark shadows of yesterday have stretched down the years to today. Selfish Interests

Stunt Democracy

One of the great mistakes which the peace-loving nations of the world, as they now call themselves, made the last time was that they failed to help the democratic elements in Germany against the very reactionary or national elements which made World War II possible. At present there is no question about elements in the German government for it is under Allied military rule. That problem is some distance in the future. But here at San Francisco and wherever the executive council or the assembly of the organization planned here may meet, the same question will arise. We have a concrete example in the question of Argentina, not too important in itself, but interesting insofar as it reveals whose selfish political and economic interests affect world affairs. Certain countries wanted to renew

But the strong hope of avoiding the pitfalls of the last time lies in the interest, the participation of the people. The people of America.

BYALAN LEMAY ~ W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Melody Jones and George Fury rode into Payneville, strangers. Melody was mistaken for the outlaw, Monte Jarrad, As a posse was after them Cherry, Monte's girl, rushed them out of town. Melody returned to Payneville, where he met Lee, former pardner of Monte's, who drove toward the ranch with him, running into Cherry and George. They soon man-aged to get a gun on Lee and started out for the shack where Monte hid the money from the express robbery. When they entered the shack they were covered by Luke Packer, the insurance detective.

As Luke went to a win-

"It's a funny thing," Luke Packer said. "It's easy to tell when a man is lying; but it plumb fails you to say when he's telling the truth. But that ain't any excuse. A thousand things ofter told me you was only a stalking horse. No such damn fool could be the real Monte Jarrad. But never caught on. Until the real Monte fired from the slope."

"I suppose I've done more mean things in my life than one man can remember," Luke Packer said. He was speaking with great difficulty now. "But the mean things you do are brushed over and forgot. The one thing nobody ever forgets . . and nobody ever forgives . . . is a baldheaded jackass of a blunder.

. . Not even God'll forgive that, Him least of all." Those were the last words Luke Packer ever said. He died with a strange aboriginal stoicism, without bitterness and without faith. Seemingly he literally believed, as he had said, that the death penalty was a suitable one for a man of his occupation to pay, for the crime of mistaking one man for another.

Melody Jones shook out a saddle blanket, and laid it over Packer's body; then immediately forgot the whole thing, for now the outer door was pushed open from outside, and flung wide, Melody thought he glimpsed the hand that swung the door; but nobody stood in the opening that gaped blackly into the night. Melody snatched his gun out in what was intended to be a lightning draw.

George Fury stepped through the door, and flattened himself against the wall inside, allowing the least possible silhouette of himself in the door-frame until the door was shut.

George Fury's eyebrows jumped now as he saw the form of Luke Packer under its blanket. He looked at it for a long time, and his face was very grim. "So now they got a corpus delicti," he said at last, hollowly.

"A whut?" "A dead man," George Fury am-"It ain't legal to hang you plified. on account of a dead man unless they can come up with one. Corpus delicti is some foreign way of saying that soon's they got the corpus you're de-licked."

"Oh." "This here is rock - bottom," George Fury said, completely with-out hope. "Up until now we was in bad shape, but all right. Even if they hung you for Monte Jarrad, we could of proved the mistake. But what good will it do to prove who you ain't, now that you come fitted up with a corpus delicti of your own?"

Melody put away his gun. "Sometimes," he said, "it don't seem to me like we get the breaks."

"I suppose you realize," George Fury said saltily, "there's a posse pretty near on top of us right now?' "George," said Cherry de Longpre with deep gravity, "you shouldn't have done this."

"Who, me? What? Done which?" "You shouldn't have shot him." "I shouldn't of what? Shot who?"

"The man under that blanket is -was an express company detective. His name was Luke Packer. He was one of the most feared peace officers in the West; everybody knows his name. There isn't a single man in the whole territory who wouldn't have been a better choice for you to kill than this man." "Yes. but—but—"

"There's going to be such a manhunting hullabaloo as the West has never seen before. I wouldn't give two cents for the chances of either one of you!"

George Fury looked from the girl to his partner, and back again, slowly, with the dreary disillusion of a man who witnesses an all time

"So now," he drawled, "you can't neither of you think of no better out than to blame the whole damn calamity on me." "It ain't any question of blaming nobody, George," Melody said sad-

"Why yew be-George reddened.

fewzled numpus-" "I guess," Melody told Cherry, "we got him on our hands. That's how come he shot Packer."

Cherry just stood there looking bleak, and stunned-a little glassyeved. The full complication of their disaster was still soaking its way into her mind.

"It wasn't the real George done this," Melody said. "It was a bot-tle of liquor shot Packer, just the same as if it capered in here and popped him with its cork, When George drinks, he ain't nothing but a bottle with laigs."

"I heard you fire the shot that Both hands," dropped him." George was pitying them now, in a weary, embittered way. "I was right outside. And Thingan said, angering. "And be when I come in, you was under the pert, before I let fly!" table, your six-gun smoking in your damn hand."

"You mean, I shot him?" "You finally got it, son."

"Why is a hole in the window, and glass on the floor, if I shot him?" Melody demanded. "You think I run outside, and shot, and sudden run back?" "I don't know nothing about that,"

"Why is they blood on the floor by the window, where he fell?" Melody insisted. "And how does the corpus get from there up on the bunk, if I'm under the table when I shoot him daid? You think the corpus hauls off and leaps up under that blanket, when he hears you coming in?"

This gave George pause. He grew suddenly very still as something else that was going on, beyond the range of their argument, beyond the cabin clearing, became plain to him. Cherry watched him.

"Can you hear the posse?" she whispered.

George shook his head. "Something else is tooken place," he said with a new bleak awe. "So that was it! I'm sorry, Melody. It wasn't you shot Packer. I should of knowed you wasn't up to nothing so practical as that."

"I don't foller this," Melody said. George pleaded with him, "Don't try to git it through your head. We ain't get time for no such complicated projick as that! If you want out of this, will you please, please do like I say, jest for the next few minutes?"

"Go catch your ponies," George Fury ordered Melody. All the deadlevel urgency he could put into his low tones was there. "Saddle 'em both, yours and Cherry's. Then git mine. He's about forty rods down the crick, in a little meadow. You can't miss catching him because he's close hobbled, and he's also short picketed."

Melody stood and waited, so sure that Cherry and George were on his heels that at first he was glad to have got the saddling done before they caught up and found him unready. By and by he sat down, his back against a boulder and one ankle on a cocked-up knee. His bulletnick was hurting very interestingly now; he idly picked pine needles out of his bloody ear, and wondered if he would lose the whole shebang. Melody Jones now got stiffly up onto his heels, and mounted Harry Henshaw. Riding Harry and leading the other ponies, he turned back toward the adobe, on no better theory than that he had waited long enough. He approached the cabin with some caution, riding with his led ponies in places where the animals' unshed hoofs were least likely to clop upon stone. The three ponies moved like ghosts as he rode into the little meadow.

And now a burst of outrage lifted him in his stirrup bows. The adobe was well illuminated now, as if every candle in the place had been lighted.

He stopped then and looked around him. Cherry de Longpre and George Fury were not alone. Three interlopers made the cabin seem packed. Their guns were in their hands: and they had so placed themselves that they could keep an eye on George Fury while their guns converged upon Melody at the door. The body of Luke Packer, however, was no longer in the bunk.

"All right, m'boy," the oldest of the three men said, "I'm Sheriff Thingan-the big end of the law in Payneville. Stick your fingers in your mouth," he ordered surprising-

It is difficult to detect the ordinary "slow leak" in time to prevent de-structive "roadside flats," The Office of Defense Transportation recom mends an effective cure for stealthy leaks: (1) Make sure valve caps have been screwed on finger tight. (2) Before adding air be sure to test pressure in each tire. (3) Check variations in tire pressure—a marked difference in pressure indicates a slow leak, which should be repaired immediately.

A kilowatt hour is simply the unit by which electricity is measured (just as a gallon is the unit by which you order gasoline - if you have any coupons

How it got the name "kilowatt hour" is easily explained. "Kilo" is a prefix meaning 1000; "Watt" (named after the Scotch inventor, James Watt) refers to the amount of light or power produced; and "hour" gives us the time factor. Thus, when you buy one "kilowatt hour" of electricity you get enough to light one 1000-watt bulb for one hour -or 1000 one-watt bulbs for the same length of time. Quite a bit, isn't it, when you consider that all the average customer pays for electricity is about 4c a kilowatt hour.

AS SOON as we can, we'll bring to bear on the Japs all the additional might we've been using against Germany.

What will it cost, this Moving Day of War? Estimate it in these terms: The job of moving millions of men from one front to another. Thousands of ships to carry the supplies of battle. Swarms of new-type air-

The Disappointing Homecoming

"He thinks there is too much fussing in the way Lina does things; flowers on the table and beauty parlor every week and taking Jane to dancing school—what the heck does all that matter, anyway."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

TINA and Robert Adams were married five years ✓ ago. They had a little daughter two years old when Bob went off for navy duty in March, 1943. Now, after more than a year's service he is home again, to stay, and has taken up his life where he left off, as a junior member of his uncle's law firm in a small town.

Lina wrote Bob constant and affectionate letters while he was away, sent clippings and snapshots and presents every week. She was lonely; she loved the memory of their marriage, their home, their perfect companionship. And of course, as so many mothers and wives are doing, she idealized the thought of Robert; he was perfect. Every night she and little Jane looked at his picture and said, "Goodnight, Daddy. Come home safe to Mummy and Jane."

Robert got a great reception when he finally did come back, but almost immediately things began to go wrong and they haven't feelings.

Robert says that he hasn't changed at all; he never did like meeting people and going places, he never was especially fond of kids. If Lina would let him alone he'd be all right. He doesn't sleep any too well, and he hates arguing. He thinks there is too much fussing in the way Lina does things; flowers on the table and beauty parlor every week and taking Jane to dancing school-what the heck does all that matter, anyway.

'Muses by the Hour.'

Lina's letter says, in part: "He used to be sunny, easily amused, ready to fit into my plans. He simply used to adore Jane. Now he never notices her, and of course, at the age of four, she hasn't sense enough to be friendly with him in spite of it, He muses by the hour, staring at the floor; not hearing me, apparently, if I speak, and not answering if he does hear. He won't go anywhere, and even with clients he has a sort of 'what's-the-difference - anyway' attitude that doesn't help him in business.

"The other night," Lina's letter goes on, "I had a dish he likes for dinner and he said to me briefly and shortly, 'Good.' This encouraged me to say that there ought to be a mixed green salad with it, but that I had hunted all over for chives, chicory and cress without success. 'So you hunted all over for chives, chicory and cress, did you?' he said in a dreadful voice. And he got up and slammed out of the house. He came back late and apologized in a sort of grudging way, and I cried all night. I'm so sorry for him, and yet I feel that I can't stand this, "Yesterday I asked him if he simply didn't like me, I seem to irritate him so, and he answered that I could draw any conclusion I liked. I asked him if he would like me to go to my mother for awhile, and he said that he had seen that coming, and knew I was crazy to get away.

BATTLE NEUROSIS

Robert has come home, discharged honorably, after a year's active duty in the navy. Like so many other veterans, he seems constantly moody and depressed. He is cold to his pretty wife, and unappreciative of her efforts to please him and to help him fit into the old ways of life. His little daughter doesn't interest him, nor his law practice, nor any-thing that used to delight him.

Robert is suffering from the well-known effects of the terrible strain and horror of war. Only time will cure him.

an, or is it my fault? We're both writing you, and we want a fair answer. Who is right and who is

My dear Lina and Bob, my answer is that neither is wrong. The deep and bitter wrong is when the the table. Try a freshly cooked straightened out yet. It is as stupid a solution of international differences as was the cups with golden corn kernel cenold custom of men and women going in cheerful groups to a pest set your cap for, then you'll like house to have smallpox all together and so immunize themselves. But the smallpox inoculation affected only a few persons, and this war is touching us all.

Love Lives On

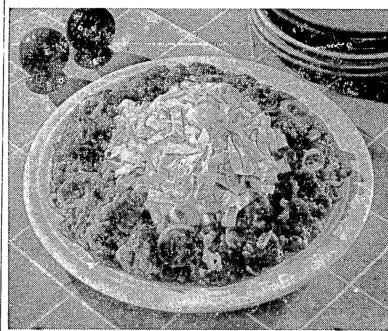

I believe that under this present trouble your old love and companionship live on. But Robertas was inevitable, has come back with a mind and soul and heart scarred by the terrible realities of modern warfare. He has seen the men beside whom he worked, the men who were his companions, blown to pieces, maimed, drowned, frozen, hungry, exhausted. He has gone for months - not days, not weeks, but months, without those common luxuries Lina has taken for granted; a warm house, a good reading light, quiet meals, the blessed security of America. When he sees Lina concerned for a hairdo, for Jane's dancing slippers, for the Hollandaise sauce and the fresh flowers, a sort of madness at the insane contrast comes over him. and he can hardly breathe the air of Lina, on her side, is justified, too. She believed that all he wanted, when he went away, was for her to keep the home fires burning, go in with her nursing twice a week, keep up with her Red Cross work, scrupulously watch for tin and fat and paper salvages, obey the food and fuel laws-all these she has done. She hasn't complained of loneliness or duliness or food shortages. She expected praise and she didn't get it. Give time and patience to your problem, Lina and Bob. It can be solved by a determination to understand and help each other. There will be a million more like it for the women of America to handle. Render this last aid to your government; that you lift just one of these difficulties from the great total, that you lessen just by so much the fearful crisis of postwar days.

Keeping Eggs Fresh Do not wash eggs until you are ready to use them. An egg shell has a protective film which helps to keep bacteria and odors from getting through the pores. Washing removes that film, and the egg then spoils rapidly. To wipe off solled spols on eggs, use a rough, dry cloth. Keep eggs in a refrigerator or other cold place to hold their freshness. Because eggs absorb odors readily, store them away from strong-smelling foods such as onions, cheese, pickles and kraut.

Some of our homemakers feel that rationing has become so tight, it is difficult to set a tasty dish before the family. It's true we are learning to use a great variety of foods, but all these can be made delicious as well as pleasing as to appearance. Meat Memos: Extend low-point meats with breading, garnishing and fillings to make them appetizing and point-saving.

Bacon can be dipped in beaten egg and bread crumbs, then fried and served as an appetizing meat

Honeycomb or pocket tripe becomes savory when given the egg and bread crumb treatment. Serve it with broiled bacon and tomatoes for flavor contrast.

Ground lamb patties take on flavor value when served with grilled fresh pineapple and tomato slices.

Small shoulder roasts will stretch further when stuffed with bread, celery, parsley or onion dressing. Make plenty of rich gravy for a fill-in feature.

It Seems That Someone Was Left at the Post

Three fellows arrived at a railway station to find they were half an hour too early for the train. So they went out for a drink. When they returned they found the train had left. Cheerfully they went out for another drink. They returned much later to find a train in the station, and two of the men just managed to throw themselves on before it started. Whereat the remaining chap started to laugh.

He laughed so much that a porter inquired as to what he was laughing at.

Still laughing heartily, he explained: "Those two friends of mine who got on the train had really come to see me off."

WAR ALL OVER

The war in Europe is won! Your pulpwood played a big part in winning it and in keeping our casualties as low as possible. Now our Army and Navy are preparing to go into the Pacific with greater power.

The Jap has only one hope: If American workers on our home front relax and take things easy, our forces will not get the supplies they need. Less supplies means more dead and wounded. Then (so the Jap hopes) a war-weary America will agree to a "soft" place and in another generation the Sons of Heaven can try again.

Pulpwood Shortage Acute

The need for "double packaging" vast quantitles of supplies for shipment across the Pacific has pushed pulpwood requirements higher than ever before. There must be no let-up in the flow of pulpwood now. Keep it coming till the Jap too is licked.
